

Check Your Citations: MLA

If you copied and pasted your citations from an article database or another citation generator, be sure to double-check the formatting for errors. Use the citation below as an example:

Lybecker, Donna L., et al. "Trash or Treasure: Recycling Narratives and Reducing Political Polarization." Environmental Politics, vol. 22, no. 2, 2013, pp. 312-332. Academic Search Premier, doi: 10.1080/09644016.2012.692935.

For every citation, ask yourself:		Example:
1	Is the author(s) name(s) listed as last name, first name?	Lybecker, Donna L.
2	If there are 2 authors, use the last name, first name format for the 1 st author and list the 2 nd author in regular format.	Lybecker, Donna L. and Emily Garcia. *Not in example
3	If there are 3 or more authors, did you add "et al." after the first author?	Lybecker, Donna L., et al.
4	Is the title of the journal or book italicized?	Environmental Politics
5	Is the title of the article (or author) in all caps? If so, fix this! Only capitalize the major words, first word, and last word of the title.	"Trash or Treasure: Recycling Narratives and Reducing Political Polarization."
6	If an article is in a journal, is the volume number and issue number included in the citation? If not, fix this!	vol. 22, no. 2 *The issue number is listed as "no." for number.
7	If the source is found using an online library database, did you include the database name and italicize it? If not, fix this!	Academic Search Premier
8	Is there only a + sign after the first page number? If so, fix this! The entire range of page numbers should be listed.	pp. 312-332
9	Is the DOI (or URL) the last element of the citation?	doi: 10.1080/09644016.2012.692935.
